Half a decade of diving the Phoenician Wreck off Xlendi - artefacts, bits and pieces with a story to tell.

Lecture by Prof. Timmy Gambin

21st October 2020

2020 was the fifth consecutive year that an international team led by the University of Malta dived on the 7th century BC Phoenician Shipwreck off Xlendi Bay in Gozo. It is also the third full season of excavation that has been completed - despite the logistical and practical difficulties brought about by COVID-19.

This talk covers the latest undertakings of the excavation team, research currently underway with colleagues both in Malta and overseas as well as plans for the future of this unique site.
